

Connecting with your University's President...

It starts with YOU.

Invite your University President to the Giving Ceremony and raise awareness for your class!

How?

- At TCU, when the chancellor did not agree immediately to attend, students scheduled a meeting to convince him in person.
- When Vanderbilt students found out the chancellor had a conflict on the day of the giving ceremony, they moved the event in order to include him.
- Notre Dame students convinced their president through a series of emails explaining the importance of his attendance.

GIVING CEREMONY HIGHLIGHT

"I'm impressed with what you've done, and impressed too with our partners in the community that do such great work. The generous people are the happy people. They find in their lives meaning. They find a purpose to life. And that is how to build a worthwhile life."

– Father John Jenkins, President, Notre Dame University

Presidents from 26 Universities Have Attended
